The history of communism encompasses a wide variety of ideologies and political movements sharing the core theoretical values of common ownership of wealth, common control of the means of production and the absence of social class distinctions. It includes a broad range of political and social movements that have sought to establish a society in which the state is replaced by collective self-management, the economy by planned or cooperative production, and society by solidarity and equality.

Some of the founders of communism are Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels, who developed the basic ideas of scientific communism in the mid-19th century. Their ideas were further developed by Vladimir Lenin and Mao Zedong, who created the vanguard party and the state-controlled economy in the early 20th century. The history of communism includes events such as the Russian Revolution of 1917, the Chinese Revolution of 1949, and the Cuban Revolution of 1959.

In recent years, there has been a resurgence of interest in communism, with a number of countries and political movements adopting communist policies. However, the extent to which communism can be considered a viable political and economic system is still a subject of debate.

The row over Rajnath Singh’s comments on Savarkar: Congress, historian Irfan Habib and Owaisi slam BJP for ‘distortion of history’

Defence Minister Rajnath Singh appears to have stirred up quite a controversy with his comment that it was on Mahatma Gandhi’s request that Vinayak Damodar Savarkar was released from jail. Congress leader Jairam Ramesh and AIMIM chief Asaduddin Owaisi shared on Twitter a letter by Gandhi on 25 January, 1920 to Savarkar’s brother regarding a case.
